

About the Editor

Russ Lockwood has been bouncing around the miniatures world for the last 25 years in one capacity or another. Most know him as creator and CEO of MagWeb.com (on-line archive of 162 military history and related magazines from Coalition Web, Inc. from 1996-2009). He appeared on camera on The History Channel (Modern Marvels), ABC, NBC, Fox, and various cable TV shows as well as on various radio shows. MagWeb was also covered by the NY Times, USA Today, and other newspapers, a variety of trade and consumer magazines, and a multitude of on-line sites. He's given lectures at various HMGS conventions, Origins War College, and various professional meetings and seminars. Although MagWeb closed in 2009, those white MagWeb rulers still appear on wargaming tabletops across the country.

On the prior professional front, Lockwood was Editorial Director of AT&T's web division, Senior Editor at Personal Computing Magazine, Assistant Editor at Creative Computing Magazine, Telecommunications Editor for A+ Magazine (Apple), tech writer at AT&T, Staff Writer (Financial) NY Times Information Service, and freelancer for PC Sources, Windows Sources, PC, MacUser, Byte, Restaurant Business, Hotel Business, Computer Buyer's Guide and Handbook, and other magazines. He also hosted a radio show, ComputerWise, for five years, and was an on-line editor for ZiffNet on Compuserve and Ziffnet on Prodigy.

He is currently a freelance editor and writer covering financial and military defense news, with a concentration on the retail industry. If you are really interested, go to the web site Linked In, where he maintains a profile. Yes, he's available for freelance editorial work, with special wargaming rates for wargaming-specific projects.

On the miniatures front, you may have seen his columns and articles in various hobby publications in the 1990s and 2000s. Lockwood is also the author of:

Snappy Nappy: Simple, Subtle & Ultrafast Miniature Rules for the Napoleonic Era, and,

Hyperspace Hack: Ultrafast Spaceship Fleet Battles with Miniatures

(both published in 2009 and available from OMM: www.onmilitarymatters.com).

Lockwood also edited:

Combat Action Command: WWII Miniatures Rules for 10/12mm, 15mm, & 20mm Battles by Lee Sowers (published in 2012 and also available from OMM).

Comments and questions may be e-mailed to: lockwood@voicenet.com